

SOCIOR VIIION PIN-UP

Patrick Troughton as Doctor Who.

ZOMBOS, CITY OF THE DAMNED, WHERE EMOTION IS FORBIDDEN. HERE, THE DOCTOR AND HIS REBEL FRIENDS HAVE COME TO BRING A WARNING — BUT TOO LATE! BARABARA — DEADLY BLOODBUGS — HAVE ENTERED THE CITY!!!

ALREADY, BILLIONS OF BLOODBUGS HAD

REACHED CITY LEVEL

UNIT 821/900B REPORTS SHE UNIT 107/012A REPORTS JE IS BEING EATEN! IS UNABLE TO OBEY INSTRUCTIONS

ART: DAVE GIBBONS

Or Who Weekly is published by Marvel Comics Ltd., Jadwin House, 205-211 Kentish Town Road, London NW5. Edited by Dez Skinn. All Dr Who material is copyright © 1979 BBC. All other material is copyright < 1979 by Marvel Comics Ltd., a division of Cadence Industries Corp. No similarity between any of the fictional names, characters, persons, and/or institutions herein with those of any living or dead persons or institutions is intended, and any similarity which may exist is purely coincidental. Not to be sold in the USA or Canada. Display advertising contact: Morrison Brown, Media Selling Services, 218A High Street, Guildford, Surrey GU1 3JD.

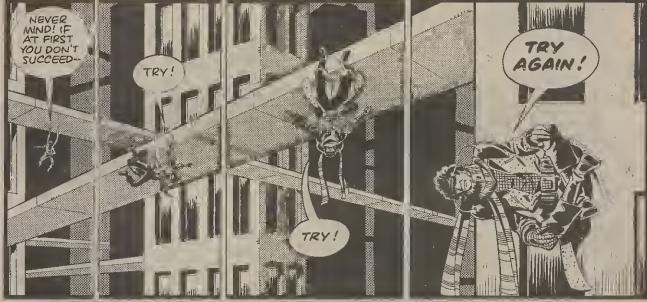

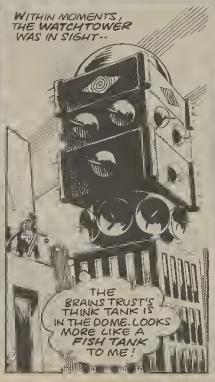

AS THE MODERATORS TELEPORTED IN, THE DOCTOR TELEPORTED OUT --

CRAZY CAPTION 15

ere's another one of our crazy caption competitions. Just think of the funniest line you can, to go with the empty speech balloon (25 words or less), and you could win £5! Ten signed photos of Tom Baker will go to the runners-up. Send your entries — on postcards only, please — postmarked no later than January 21st, to us at:

CRAZY CAPTION NUMBER 15, Marvel Comics, Jadwin House, 205-211 Kentish Town Road, London NW5.

This week and every week, we'll be publishing the name of the lucky winner and his/her caption, so keep 'em coming, captioneers!

RESULTS OF CRAZY CAPTION NUMBER 9 THE WINNER:

Jill Amanda Haworth wins £5 for her crazy caption repeated below.

Signed colour photos of Tom Baker as the Doctor, have gone to the ten runners-up.

Kevin O'Roueke from Workington; Philip Barrett from Trowbridge; Steven Johnson from Coventry; Andrew Kneale from Southbourne; Kenneth Gardiner from Stowmarket; David Burton from Eastbourne; Geoffrey Henman from Rainham; Keith Jones from Oswestry; Philip Landau from Finchley; Andrew Smith from Oldburywarley.

INSIDE THE TARDIS Bart

he TARDIS is far more than just another Time-Space machine. In many ways it is the emblem of Dr Who, the gateway for traveller and viewer alike to see fabulous worlds and eras far beyond the reach of normal mortals. The dilapidated blue Police Box shell — of a type common to the London streets in the 1960s — gives little hint of the wonders to be found once we step over the threshold into that now-famous, gleaming interior.

Let us begin our look at the TARDIS with a guided tour of the ship as it first appeared in the early William Hartnell serials.

The first thing to notice, from the outside, is that it does look like a Metropolitan Police telephone box. This amazing fact — considering its interior — is accomplished by the inclusion of of a Chameleon Circuit into the ship's "wiring" (I use the term "wiring" loosely as the TARDIS does not rely on such out-dated concepts as wires for its electronic make-up). The Chameleon Circuit allows the TARDIS to scan a landing place before it materialises, and disguises the outside of the craft to look like artifact common to the world it is resting on. Thus the TARDIS can look like a rock, a computer bank, even a sedan chair. Or rather, it could if the device was working. Unfortunately for the Doctor, his ship has many faults, one of which is the Chameleon Mechanism. The last disguise it was able to adopt was of a Police Box, and as such it has remained over the last sixteen years.

A SUPREME FEAT OF TEMPORAL ENGINEERING

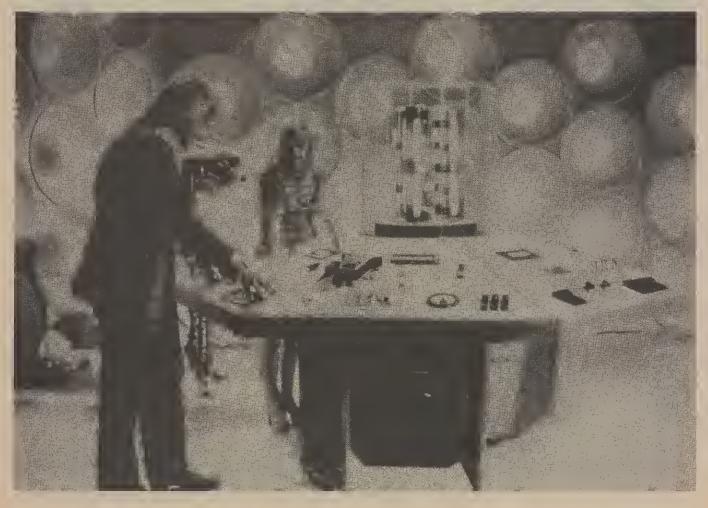

To the curious observer, however, there are two clues which show that the TARDIS is different from a normal Police Box. Firstly, the ship gives off a faint but audible electrical hum. Secondly, its lock would baffle any locksmith on this planet.

Although the lock resembles a standard "Yale" device, it does incorporate an elaborate defence system. The key to the TARDIS must be telepathically attuned by the wearer to enable him to open the exterior doors. Any non-Time Lord trying to open the locked door with the key would find the mechanism jammed, thus foiling would-be intruders.

Any attempt to batter the doors down would be equally futile as the TARDIS is also indestructible. Sheer drops from cliff faces, even the fire power of the Daleks, all are useless against the ship's external strength.

We, however, have our own key, and, moving through the Police Box doors we instantly cross a dimensional bridge. Although the exterior "exists" in the real world, the interior is within a different, but relative dimension. Hence the title Time and Relative Dimensions in Space; TARDIS. Its true existence is outside time, fashioned by the supreme feats in temporal engineering mastered by the old Time Lords. This engineering masterpiece also explains the first sight to greet new entrants to the TARDIS; the fact it is bigger on the inside than it is on the outside.

Phrases like "dimensionally transcendental" tend to mean little to the majority of the Doctor's companions, so he once tried to explain the theory to Leela using a clever analogy. He took two boxes, one much larger than the other and placed the large one several feet away from Leela. The smaller one he brought close to Leela's eyes, and then asked her which box appeared to her to be larger. Obviously the smaller one appeared larger as it was nearer. "Exactly" exclaimed the Doctor, "Now if you could keep that larger box over there, and yet still have it here, then the larger one would fit inside the smaller one, Temporal Physics, a key Time Lord discovery." Don't worry, Leela did not understand it either!

Accepting the notion, then, that the interior is very large, and once your eyes have accustomed themselves to the walls, batterned by serried ranks of sunken, circular designs, the next thing to notice is the central console itself.

JOURNEYING THROUGH INFINITY

The six-sided control console is the heart of the TARDIS. From here, the ship's movement through Infinity and Eternity is governed. Each of the six panels on the console relates to different functions to do with the operating of the craft. One panel is for navigational readouts, another houses the guidance controls. A third relays to the ship's computers via the Telepathic Circuit link, and a further panel contains the switches and levers to operate all the various recording and scanning instruments, used whenever the TARDIS lands on a new planet. Opposite this panel, mounted on the wall, is the scanner screen by which the TARDIS occupants can view the Most important of all is the panel relating to the drive systems of the TARDIS. The master dematerialisation switch is mounted here, and when that is pulled back, it engages the power source of the ship and causes the exterior atoms to be dissolved from the "real" universe and re-assembled in the nothingness of the Time Vortex.

At the centre of the six panels is the glass column, technically referred to as The Time Rotor. The power which fuels the TARDIS' journeys is held beneath the Time Rotor and depending on the actions of the Rotor, the Doctor is able to obtain a full status report on what the ship is doing. If the Rotor is still, then the ship has materialised. If it is rising and falling, then the TARDIS is in flight. And, if the internal Rotor circuitry is revolving, then the TARDIS is obtaining data on its external environment.

Above: The Doctor (Tom Baker), Romana (Mary Tamm) and K-9. Left: The Doctor (John Pertwee) with Jo Grant (Kate Manning). Below: Jamie (Fraser Hines) and Zoe (Wendy Padbury).

If all this seems very complicated to you, then spare a thought for the Doctor when he first stole this ship from the Time Lords. All the information the Doctor had on the TARDIS (in Gallifrey terms — a Type 40 T.T. Capsule) was a set of handwritten notes in his diary that he managed to acquire from observing other TARIDS pilots.

THE DOCTOR'S DILEMMA

To make it easier to understand, try and imagine yourself suddenly thrust into a room containing a computer, with only the operational manual to give you access to the vast store of information and processes such a computer will house.

The Doctor (William Hartnell), Barbara (Jacqueline Hill), Ian (William Russell) and Vicki (Maureen O'Brien). Behind them is the Astral Map, a machine capable of projecting three-dimensional images of programmed star systems.

This was the dilemma facing the first Doctor when he and his grand-daughter absconded from Gallifrey. He knew the switches to pull to fly the ship, but he lacked full understanding of all the systems to be able to guide the TARDIS accurately on planned voyages. He improved on this technique during his third, more mechanically-minded incarnation. He is still learning about the ship even now!

INTO THE FIFTH DIMENSION

To aid the Doctor, several other instruments in the Control Room may be used to plan trips in the fourth and fifth dimensions. The Astral Map can project three-dimensional images of programmed star systems. The Time Path Indicator gives read-outs of relative positions in the Time Vortex. And just to complete the picture, the first Doctor also liked to clutter the control room with pieces of antique bric-a-brac among which is a working Ormulu Clock, for those worried about the passage of Time in the TARDIS.

When the Time Lords designed the TARDIS machines, they intended them to be used as travelling research and study laboratories, hence all the creature comforts were built into them. Just off the main control room is the dormitory section, where couch-like beds can be swung down from the walls. Even Time Lords have been known to seek the benefits of sleep every so often.

In another alcove stands the food machine. Although not dissimilar in size and shape to a petrol pump, this machine can in fact manufacture a variety of dishes that would do justice to any restaurant on Earth. It works on the principle that tastes, like colours, can be infinitely blended, if one has the correct primary basics to start with.

Another doorway leads off the main control room which takes one to all the other rooms, levels, corridors and alcoves in the vast, sprawling vessel.

The Power Room is an area where the Doctor can monitor the functioning of the energies which drive the ship.

BEHIND POLICE BOX DOORS

The Wardrobe the TARDIS houses is truly impressive. Select any time on any planet, and chances are you would find something suitable to wear amid the extensive racks lining this area.

On many occasions the Doctor has made reference to the laboratory aboard the TARDIS. Although we viewers have yet to see it, a safe assumption is, that this would be where the Doctor effects the constant repairs needed to keep the old TARDIS in fully working order. For, just like any other pieces of complex machinery, the TARDIS has been known to break down - thoughtful Time Lord engineers even saw fit to install an emergency escape door which, on this ship, leads to the back of the Police Box, as we saw in the adventure 'The Wheel in Space'.

Dematerialisation Circuits, fluid link section, even the Interstitial Beam Synthesiser, all in their time have needed repair, and quite often the tasks of repairing faulty devices have led to some of the Doctor's more incredible adventures!

In the next part of this two-episode look at the TARDIS, Gordon Blows will be receiving some of the bizarre instances involving the TARDIS, as well as unearthing a few more of the discoveries hidden behind those deceptive Police Box doors. Don't miss it!

Next Week: INSIDE THE TARDIS part two

For a change this week, instead of selecting some of the longer letters we've received, here are as many thoughts, comments and criticisms as we can fit in

... fascinated with all the information you put in, some of it!

didn't know before and I'm a

. . .you have good artists and the Doctor Jooks Lifelike, More on one page...

serious Dr Who fan.

on K-9 in future.

.absolutely wonderful! I bet you haven't had any complaints at all! I had to buy two copies to be able to cut out the photofiles, and still keep all the other features intact!

Robin Bedford.

. . .features about the Daleks are brilliant. Love "Iron Legion" and "Return of Daleks" strips.

Stephen Haines.

. . . Loved the transfers, Don't like "fron Legion" all that much though.

George Percy.

single issue.

. . .I love the magazine, I think it's fantastic, especially the Dalek features.

Graham Charters.

. . .smashing, especially the stories. More posters or pin-ups inside, please.

. . .jumped for joy when I heard Dr Who Weekly was coming! I now have a regular order with my newsagent so I don't miss a Steven Dram.

. . .Show how K-9 works. Have a page for ordering Doctor Who posters.

...A. D. Milne.

...Alan Thomson.

...Roland Merricks.

. . . "Iron Legion" good, art is excellent. Back-ups good too.

Paul Nethercott.

... really great, but Dalek comic strip could have been longer. More pin-ups.

Mark Wilson.

Loved "Throwback: The Soul of a Cyberman". Don't normally read Marvel Comics, but Dr Who Weekly is great, Stuart Robinson.

. . .nothing is low standard, but "Iron Legion" is best.

... John Harris.

. . .! like to read about all the monsters in your new comic.

Stephen Slack.

. .include a page which lists all the Doctor Who paperbacks.

Jeremy Freeston,

. . .I enjoy the mag so much I don't like cutting anything out. Gordon Foster.

Reader Christine Borah from Horsham.

. .more on Sea Devils, Yeti, Cybermen, Axons and Ice Warriors.

Michael Tomlinson.

. . . I have bought every issue so far. The actual Dr Who strip should be 6 or 7 pages a week. Yong Montano & Dino Castrillo capture the real horror in their "War of the Worlds" strip.

Timothy Upcroft.

. . . have been waiting for years for a Doctor Who Comic. I like it very much.

Richard Briggs,

. . . I think the artwork is an improvement on the usual Marvel material. More about Davros.

Philip Young.

Reader James Mooney from Northampton.

. . .best magazine ever written for the proper character of the Doctor.

Julian Hammond.

. . .Dr Who Weekly is excellent. Especially like the Doctor Who story itself.

Scott Macdonald.

. . .include a comic strip about the Ice Warriors. Best British comic going!

Karl C. Beckett,

. . .my favourite story is "War of the Worlds".

Derek Robinson.

. . .why are there no female Daleks or Cybermen?

Martin Oates.

... more competitions, more on the Sea Devils.

Peter Thompson.

... you asked what we like best in your new comic. Everything! Michael Coppack.

. . . absolutely fantastic, just like the tv series. Set out brilliantly and deserves terrific praise.

Martin Walton.

Reader R. Shennon from Linwood.

... success on making an ultramagnificent comic, the artists are so good.

Antony Ewing.

SPECIAL ANNDUNCEMENT:

Dver the last few weeks, we have been receiving countless requests for back issues of Dr Who Weekly. Unfortunately, we do not stock back issues, so we are unable to help you with any gaps in your collections. . . except issues one and two. We have a limited quantity of the first two editions, which we are offering at cover price (12p) but please send a large stamped addressed envelope when ordering. Dffer limited to no more than two copies of each issue per household. Cheques/postal orders made payable to Marvel Comics. This offer expires Feb 4th, 19B0. Allow 2 weeks delivery.

Unfortunately, we can only accept orders from within the British Isles.

Send all back issue orders to us at:

Dr. Who Back Issues, Marvel Comics. 205-211 Kentish Town Rd., London NW5.

Based on the classic by H. G. Wells

BUT HE WAS NOW PENNH LESS AND FLED FROM HIS LODGING HOUSE...

A LETTER FROM-THE DOCTOR

Dear All,

One of the advantages of now having my very own weekly your questions as weeks go by.

And two of the most popular questions are about K-9

So, this issue you will find the first part of a special two week feature telling you everything you could possibly want to know about Time And Relative Dimensions In Space.

Though K-9 has featured quite a lot over recent weeks, as a special bonus, issue 17 (on sale in two weeks time) will feature "THE K-9 BLUEPRINTS".

Oh, and don't forget I'm waiting for all your questions to start pouring in, so the "Who Knows!" reader's page can begin. Your questions can be about anything to do with the please be sure to keep them separate from letters, quiz to start working weekends to be able to sort everything

Happy times and places,

The Doctor

THE ROMANS

This four part adventure was first shown on BBC television on January 16th, 1965.

everal weeks have passed since the Doctor, Ian, Barbara and Vicki survived a bone-jarring fall as the TARDIS toppled over the edge of a slope. Now all four members of the crew are enjoying a rare period of relaxation as tenants in a country villa, whose owner is away fighting in the unending wars of conquest. For this is the time of the Roman Empire, circa 64 AD, and as endless hot, sunny days give way to warm Mediterranean nights, the Doctor and Vicki are becoming bored with the good life and long for the excitement of Rome. The two teachers, however are more than happy to make the trips to the market the day's most strenuous activity!

It is during one such trip that the two girls are spotted by two slave traders, on the look-out for suitable "new merchandise". Marking the pair down as likely material, the two men follow them back to the villa.

Not far away, Maximus Pettulian, the famous Corinthian lyre-player, is attacked and murdered as he leaves the market, by a villain named Ascaris.

Later that afternoon, Vicki and the Doctor depart for Rome, leaving lan and Barbara behind. A while later the villa is attacked by the slave traders, Sevcheria and Didius and, after a fierce struggle, the two companions are seized and taken to be sold at auction. Along with two other men, lan is bought for work on a galley, while Barbara is kept back for sale at the richer Roman markets.

On one of the many roads that lead to Rome the Doctor and Vicki find the body of the murdered Maximus Pettulian. Just as the Doctor picks up the dead man's lyre, they are joined by a Centurion and an armed escort, commissioned to ensure the celebrated artist's safe conduct to his appointment at the capital. Deciding that other explanations might prove awkward, the Doctor resigns himself to his new identity as Pettulian, and accepts the Centurion's hospitality during the overnight stop at another luxurious villa.

During the evening, the Centurion has a visitor in the form of Ascaris, who is clearly known to the soldier. The Centurion is cross with the mute Ascaris for his evident failure to kill Pettulian, whose death would give the Emperor Nero much pleasure, and instructs him to complete his task tonight.

BARBARA SOLD AS A SLAVE

In the small hours of the morning, Ascaris steals into the Doctor's room . . . and is lucky to escape only with bruises. The next morning the journey to Rome continues. Up ahead of them, in the heart of the sprawling Roman Capital, Barbara is in the slave quarters awaiting her turn at the auction.

lan is meantime settling into his new role as a galley slave along with a Greek named Delos. There is a sudden storm, a shipwreck and very soon the two men are lying alone on a deserted beach. Recovering from their ordeal, they elect to head for Rome — Ian is worried for Barbara's safety.

In Rome, the slave auction is in full swing attended by a large crowd, among which is the newly-arrived Doctor and Vicki. The spectacle of human slavery is upsetting to the Doctor and he leads Vicki away . . . just as Barbara is brought out. She is eventually sold to Tavius from the Emperor Nero's household.

Using the rear entrances to the Emperor's palace, Tavius explains to Barbara that she was chosen because he admired the way in which she went to the aid of a fellow slave while on the auction stand. Unfortunately, says Tavius, it will not be possible to free Barbara, but as appointed handmaiden to the Empress Poppea, her future life should be relatively easy. While they talk, news echoes through the corridors that Maximus Pettulian the famous musician from Corinth has arrived, Leaving Barbara, Tavius hurries to where Pettulian, alias the Doctor, is being presented to Nero.

Vicki (Maureen O'Brien), the Doctor's new travelling companion, who finds herself as a guest of the mad Emperor of Rome — Nero!

Through a combination of flattery and outright lies the Doctor — who cannot play a note of music — manages to avoid being asked to perform. Leading the Doctor to his rooms Tavius quietly mentions that "the trouble" has been dealt with. Later he and Vicki discover the Centurion's dead body!

lan and Delos reach Rome only to be recaptured and told they will be trained as gladiators. From now on their life expectancies may be counted only in days . . .

THE COURT POISONER'S FIENDISH DELIGHT

Next day the baffled Doctor is told by Tavius that it might be best to delay the next part of his plan. As the Doctor shakes his head in bewilderment, Vicki sets off to explore the palace.

Nero is talking to Poppea, announcing that Maximus will make his Roman debut at the banquet tonight, when Tavius enters and presents

Barbara, who immediately catches the Emperor's appreciative eye — much to Poppea's intense annoyance.

Vicki's travels have taken her to the den of Locusta, the court poisoner who takes an almost fiendish delight in her art, and views it with complete detachment. Concealed behind curtain. Vicki overhears as Locusta is given specific instructions, by Poppea, for a very special brew to dispose of a potential rival. Sure enough, in the chambers above, Barbara is having a hard time dodging the advances of a very amorous Nero but finally manages to slip away. She just misses the entrance of the Doctor who later, in a steam bath, subtly quizzes Nero about possible intrigues, but without result. His heart sinks when he learns he is to be the star performer tonight.

The Empress asks Nero to cast his artistic approval over the arrangements for the banquet. Here he meets Barbara again and insists on clasping a heavy gold bracelet around her wrist. They are joined by an attendant bearing two goblets of wine, one of which is presented to Barbara. Further away, Vicki tells the Doctor that she has switched the poisoned drinks. Worried at a possible change of history, the Doctor sends word to Nero who is just about to drain his goblet. The drink is tried on a slave, with fatal results and Poppea, furious at this display of incompetence, orders Locusta to be thrown to the lions.

The Doctor (William Hartnell) and Ian (William Russell) with their new travelling companion Vicki (Maureen O'Brien).

THE DOCTOR'S MUSICAL DEBUT

That evening while the banquet is in full swing, Tavius tells the Doctor to be prepared, "all is ready for tomorrow". The Doctor is completely baffled but a more immediate problem demands his attention: at last the inevitable moment arrives when the Doctor must make his concert debut. Borrowing an idea from the fairy-tale of "The Emperor's New Clothes" the Doctor tells his audience that the music will be so soft and delicate that only those with refined, perceptive musical hearing will be able to enjoy its subtle charms. Naturally no-one wishes to appear a fool to his neighbour and so, as total silence descends over the room, the audience's faces register enraptured approval, to Nero's inactistic fury. He storms off to the gladiator's school dragging Barbara with him. Nero's reason for visiting the school is to arrange Maximus's next concert - this time to an audience of lions in the arena! The gladiatorial fight is between none other than Delos and lan, in which the Greek is victorious. Nero gives the "thumbs down", ordering Delos to sever lan's head!

Unable to kill his friend, Delos rushes to attack the Emperor and very soon a battle is raging between lan and Delos on one side, and Nero's guards on the other. As the two slaves gain the upper hand, lan calls on Barbara to come with him, but she is taken away by the retreating Nero.

Barbara's welfare is also on Poppea's mind and she has ordered Tavius to get rid of her. Tavius finds Barbara and promises to help her escape, and mentions also about Nero's arranged "Command Performance" for Pettulian.

Meanwhile Nero is showing the Doctor his own plans for the rebuilding of Rome which the Senate has rejected. With the help of his spectacle lenses the Doctor sets fire to the plans, giving the insane Emperor an idea . . .

ROME BURNS!

Later, Tavius seeks out the Doctor and warns him of the concert being planned for him in the arena. The Doctor also learns that the now dead lyre player left Corinth with the explicit aim of assassinating Nero, an intention known to his allies at court, one of which is Tavius.

Outside, a rabble is rounded up to hear Nero's instructions for setting fire to the city. Narrowly escaping from the surrounded gladiator's school, lan and Delos join the groups. With help from Tavius they are able to smuggle Barbara from the palace, and as they leave, Tavius fingers the chain hidden beneath his tunic. It is a cross, symbol of emergent Christianity which will one day replace the Roman Empire. As the fire begins, the Doctor and Vicki also manages to get away, and the two groups leave the city, each unaware of the other's presence in the adventure. Nero is happily playing his own lyre as Rome burns around him lan and Barbara reach the villa first where they are later joined by the other two. The Doctor and Vicki are so enthusiastic about their adventures in Rome that the two teachers find it impossible to recount their own tales. Eventually they give up, agreeing to let their friends think they have merely been lazing around . . .

A NEW LOCATION

The Doctor leads his companions back to the TARDIS and their next journey begins. But no sooner has the ship dematerialised than it becomes apparent something is very wrong. A force of some kind has seized control of the ship and is slowly but surely pulling it down to a new location . . . but where?

Comment

This story dispels the myth that comedy in Di Who only came with Tom Baker's portrayal of the Doctor. From start to finish "The Romans" was presented as a classic farce with companions rushing in and out of rooms just missing one another, and headed by a superb performance by comedian Derek Francis as Nero.

THE ROMANS Credits

The Doctor (William Hartnell); Ian Chesterton (William Russell); Barbara Wright (Jacqueline Hill); Vicki (Maureen O'Brien); Emperor Nero (Derek Francis); Poppea (Kay Patrick); Tavius (Michael Peake); Delos (Peter Diamond); Written by Dennis Spooner; Directed by Christopher Barry; Produced by Verity Lambert and Mervyn Pinfield,

Next Week: THE WEB PLANET

Entry Number Fifteen:~ JACQUELINE HILL

BORN: 1931

ROLE: School teacher Barbara Wright

YEARS: 1963 to 1965

OTHER TV APPEARANCES: Shop Window; Golden Boy; The Rose and the Ring, Six Proud Walers; Enemy of the People; Fabian of Scotland Yard; Romeo and Juliet.

MAJOR FILM APPEARANCE: The Blue Parrot

(1953)

MAJOR STAGE APPEARANCE: The Shrike.

SPECIAL MENTION: Although Jacqueline Hill is best known for her television work in this country she has also worked for American tv and as a top fashion model in Paris.

All of this came about as a result of a great deal of hard work on Jacqueline Hill's part, for her stage beginnings were scarcely the stuff of Hollywood legend. It was while Jacqueline was working as a wages clerk for a factory in Birmingham, that her part-time studying eventually won her a scholarship to study acting at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. In 1953 she made her first West End debut in "The Shrike".

Jacqueline Hill left the professional acting field for a long time in this country after leaving Dr Who in 1965, but viewers may have seen her last year in the BBC2 presentation of "Romeo and Juliet" which was directed by her husband.

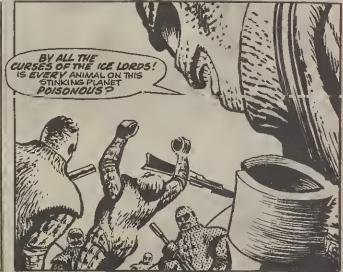

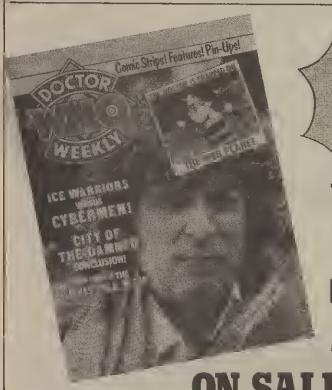

DOCTOR WHO WEEKLY NUMBER 16

ICE WARRIORS VERSUS CYBERMEN!

THREE GREAT COMIC STRIPS! FACT-PACKED PHOTO-FEATURES!

PHOTO FILE PIN-UP!

AND MUCH MORE! <

ON SALE JAN 23rd!

